

Editorial

For some time now, there has arisen some technical issues we are trying to overcome, so that the Caribbean Journal of Philosophy (CJP) can become regular and fulfil its mandate of being the space for robust academic and scholarly exchanges. We thank our contributors, readers and mentors for patience all round, As it were, this issue is brought to you with the expectation that your support, through the usual discussions, comments and reviews, will continue to enhance the quality of philosophical scholarship globally. We welcome suggestions on themes, issues and problems for subsequent volumes, and your guest editorship of issues are encouraged.